THE ELECTION.

How the Vote Stood up to 11 O'clock.

At the first ward the crowd was not large. There was no excitement; 290 votes had been cast. It is estimated that the antis were considerably in the lead, but the pros claim that their vote will not be in until after dinner.

At the second ward there were about 100 voters about the polls. With the exception of a lively talk between a colored man and a German everything was quiet. Two hundred and fifty votes had been cast, with a small majority against the amendment.

At the third ward polls there were about 150 men about the polls and no excitement; 135 votes had been cast, with the pros in the lead.

At the 4th ward polls there was quite a crowd, among them some of the leading Hebrews of the city who were putting in good work against the amendment. Here the antis claimed two to one; while the pros conceded the antis a small majority. Up to 11 o'clock 250 votes had been cast.

At the fifth ward there were but few people present, 40 votes had been cast, and the pros were in the lead.

At the sixth ward polls 250 had been cast, estimated to be very close. The antis were claiming three-fourths of the negro vote which was disputed by some of the colored people. Barnett Gibbs was among the prominent antis present. Here the antis scratched all the amendments. A wagon containing about twenty children passed the polls while the reporter was present, singing a temperance song, the crowd cheered the little people.

LATER—The antis at the sixth ward admitted at 11 o'clock that the pros were ahead.

At no place was there any undue excitement. The vote so far does not indicate an unusual vote.

Oak Lawn had polled 110 votes up to 10 o'clock and a majority of them were for the amendment.

Dangerously Ill.

Col John M. Crockett, an old-time citizen of Dallas, is lying very low at his home on the corner of Main and Sycamore streets. He is not able to recognize his friends. He was among the earliest settlers of Dallas.

The Evening Edition of the HERALD will have much election news—and will have to be late to get it.

A Great Mystery Solved.

Here recently there have been lots of residences decorated with exquisite designs of furniture and household goods of the latest styles, and there have been many inquiries where those elegant goods came from. Why, the Texas Installment Co., 619 Elm street, sell them on small, easy installments. The poor as well as the bankers are invited to give us a call, and see for themselves that we sell on the installment plan as cheap as they can buy for cash elsewhere.
